From the nature – back to the nature

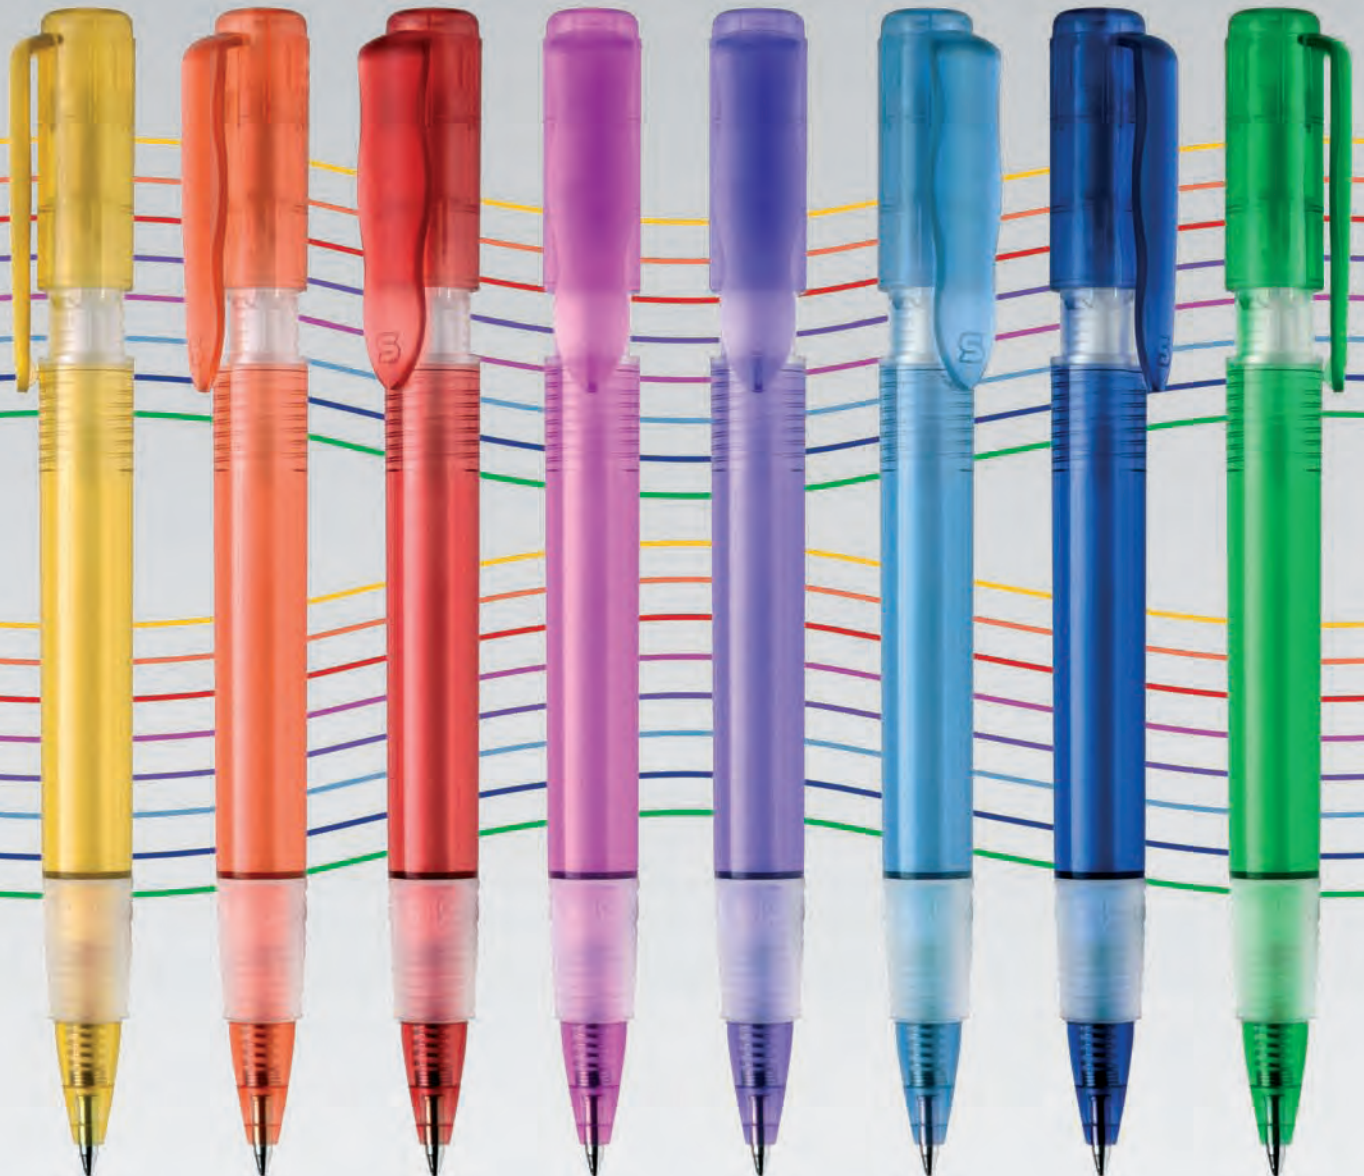

This new product is manufactured with a revolutionary material resulting in a reduced environmental impact since it is derived from natural fibres, unlike all synthetic materials derived from petroleum. But what makes it even more interesting is the final result, a pen displaying characteristics that are equal, if not superior, to those of pens manufactured with petroleum-derived materials. The fibres used to produce the new VEGETAL PEN successfully combine the feel of nature of fibres with the performance of synthetic ones. But even more importantly, this pen does not contribute to the depletion of one of nature's non-renewable resources – oil – which will eventually run out, since the product used to make it is derived from resources renewable on a yearly basis: maize.

In addition the resin used is biocompostable: that is, after undergoing an industrial composting process it breaks down in nature. Finally, the plastic used for VEGETAL PEN partly reduces atmosphere CO₂. The carbon contained in corn derives, in fact, from carbon dioxide present in the atmosphere, which is assimilated by plants through the process of photosynthesis. With this new product we are offering a product that can contribute to solving the problem of environmental waste.
